Pawly cat food

Overview

Pawly is a packaging design project for dry salmon-based cat food, created to make pet nutrition feel approachable and engaging for owners. The design focuses on shelf appeal while also improving everyday usability through a resealable system that keeps the food fresh and easy to store. The packaging aims to stand out in a saturated pet food market by combining functionality with a distinct visual identity.

Concept

The concept draws inspiration from orange cats, known for their playful and expressive personalities. This idea is translated into the packaging through warm tones, character-driven visuals, and a lively composition that creates an emotional connection with pet owners. Alongside its visual appeal, the resealable feature ensures practicality, balancing playfulness with everyday convenience.

Problem Statement

How might we design cat food packaging that stands out visually on shelves while also improving usability and maintaining product freshness for everyday use?